August 22 – Jerry Gilland, Overview of Service Dog Training

Jerry talked to our club about how he selects and trains service dogs that are given to kids who need to be protected from eating certain foods (such as peanut products) they are highly allergic to. To select a pup to be a future service-dog, Jerry starts by meeting with the most highly-regarded dog breeder in Colorado to test pups in a new litter for qualities essential to making a good service-dog. These qualities include self-confidence, submissiveness, startle-response, general level of excitement, playfulness, discomfort tolerance, curiosity, scent-detection, and generally good temperament and intelligence. Upon selection of a pup (each costs $1750), Jerry teaches the dog to respond to over 70 voice-commands that will be used by the eventual child owner of the dog. As demonstrated by Jerry's current service dog in training "Casey", one of the most impressive of these command-responses was demonstrated by Jerry when he said "meds", and then see Casey immediately search for a hidden packet of medications (a clove scent in the bag allowed Casey to detect it and retrieve it). We in Foothills Kiwanis commend and thank Jerry for leading our club's service-dog project that will help many children in the future who are in need of service-dog care.

August 29 – Dean Jones, "Coping with Hard Times"

Dr. Dean Jones (received PhD from the University of Washington and a professor at four other universities) talked about how everyone needs to learn lessons from difficult times they go through, especially how to "live in the moment". Dean spent over 20 years to help homeless people in Portland and other cities through his late-night downtown street ministry. In some cases, individuals he worked with gave up all hope and struggled with thoughts of suicide, which led him to provide counseling in this area. He collaborated with Michael Joseph to author "Climbing up the Downward Spiral" that looks at drug/alcohol addiction, mental illness, and suicide. An avid runner, he participated in numerous long-distance running events in the past. His last long-distance race was a 50-miler that he completed at the age of 65.
